

A mission from the supreme state audit is on the field since July 22, 2013 to verify government projects carried out 2010-2011 budget year, the government said on Monday.

Logged in the Public Investment Budget (BIP) of the State, the auditors will go to the East, South and Centre regions to evaluate 2,235 projects worth 204.6 billion francs CFA.

In a statement, the government said acts of corrupt managements will be transferred to the disciplinary board of the Supreme State Audit Ministry and in contrast, good practices will compete for a price of managerial excellence. Also, the statement also redefined the role of the mission, and said the aim was to contribute to the effective management of public funds.

The results of this third verification process by the State of Cameroon since 2008 are not available to the general public.

In Cameroon, corruption is at the forefront in the management of public investment budgets. At the same time, investments figures for some sectors are kept secret.
